Testo in italiano:
Il progetto indaga la presenza e ruolo delle fortezze con bastioni nello Stato pontificio del XVI e XVII secolo, in uno Stato cioè che gli studi hanno qualificato come "prototipo dello Stato moderno". In maniera piuttosto significativa, gli stessi contemporanei chiamavano queste opere difensive fortificazioni "alla moderna". Alla luce di questa circostanza, il fatto che il nuovo modello di fortezza con bastioni fosse effettivamente realizzato per la prima volta nello Stato pontificio (Forte di Nettuno, 1503) acquisisce un significato particolare, tanto più se si considera che sinora questo aspetto è passato quasi inosservato anche presso gli studiosi specialisti. Tutto ciò prepara il terreno a uno stimolante campo di ricerca, la cui prospettiva va ben oltre il contesto locale. Il progetto si focalizza dunque esclusivamente sulle fortificazioni pontificie "alla moderna", iniziando con un inventario dettagliato di queste opere difensive (che comprendono il Forte di Nettuno, la Fortezza Pia di Ascoli, la Cittadella di Ancona, la Fortezza di Ferrara e il Forte Urbano in Emilia). Per tutti questi edifici, sarà decisivo raccogliere fonti relative alla loro progettazione, costruzione e gestione. Tale documentazione sarà raccolta in una base di dati, che costituirà il primo esito del progetto. In linea con i suoi obiettivi del progetto, saranno indagati i più ampi e interconnessi contesti politico-istituzionali, culturali e socio-economico-finanziari. In primo luogo, le opere sulle fortificazioni che circolavano nello Stato pontificio saranno studiate, redigendo una bibliografia completa. Poi, sarà accordata speciale attenzione ai risvolti economici di queste opere difensive: quali ne erano i costi? Come venivano finanziate? Chi ne sosteneva l’oner? Qual era il loro effetto sull’economia? Inoltre, saranno prese in debita considerazione le ripercussioni di questi cantieri sul tessuto sociale delle città e terre, al fine di ricostruire le reazioni dispiegate dai diversi attori. La concreta delle fortezze coi territori rispettivamente circostanti offre l’occasione di includere nel progetto un elemento di progettazione urbana e architettonica. Gli architetti inclusi nelle unità di ricerca mireranno alla reintegrazione territoriale attiva delle fortezze prese in considerazione. In primo luogo, è necessaria un’analisi specifica sia degli edifici...
che del loro ruolo nei loro rispettivi contesti urbani. Poi, sarà ricercata una restituzione del significato degli edifici in vista di un loro futuro uso sostenibile, capace di salvaguardare le identità storiche. Saranno aggiunte valutazioni tipologiche a fini di riuso e ricupero, come pure indagini ai livelli urbano e sociale. Questi studi confluiranno in ipotesi operative di pianificazione da condividersi coi territori cui pertengono, stabilendo una collaborazione con le amministrazioni locali. In questo modo, la disseminazione della conoscenza storica acquisita dal gruppo di ricerca costituirà una componente qualificante nel corpo del progetto.

Text in English:
The project investigates the presence and role of the bastioned fortresses in the sixteenth- and the seventeenth-century Papal State, that is, in a state that scholarship has defined as a "prototype of the modern State". Significantly enough, the contemporaries themselves called these works of defence "alla moderna" fortifications. In light of this, the fact that the new model of the bastion fort was actually implemented for the first time in the Papal State (Fort of Nettuno, 1503) acquires particular significance, even more so when we consider that hitherto this aspect has passed almost unnoticed also among specialist scholars. All of this paves the way for a stimulating field of research, the scope of which goes well beyond the local context. Accordingly, the project focuses exclusively on the papal "alla moderna" fortifications, starting from a detailed inventory of these works of defence (including the Fort of Nettuno, the Fortress Pia of Ascoli, the Citadel of Ancona, the Fortress of Ferrara, and the Emilian Forte Urbano). For all these buildings, it will be crucial to gather sources relating to their design, construction, and management. Such documentation will be collected in a database, which will constitute the first project’s output. In line with the above-stated goals of the project, the broader and interconnected political-institutional, cultural and socio-economic-financial contexts will be investigated. Firstly, the books on fortification which circulated within the Papal State will be studied, drawing up a comprehensive bibliography. Then, special attention will be given to the economic implications of these works of defence: How much did they cost? How were they financed? Who paid for them? Which was their impact on the economy? Furthermore, the repercussions of these buildings on the social fabric of towns and cities will be taken into due consideration, in order to reconstruct the reactions by the different actors. The concrete interaction of the fortresses with their respective territories offers the opportunity to include in the project an element of urban and architectural design. The architects involved in the Research Units will aim at the active territorial reintegration of the fortresses under consideration. Primarily, a specific analysis of both the buildings and their role in their respective urban contexts is required. Then, a restitution of the meaning of the buildings will be sought, in view of their future sustainable use, capable of safeguarding historical identities. Typological evaluations for the purpose of reuse and recovery will be added, as well as investigations at the urban and social levels. These studies will flow into operational planning hypotheses to be shared with the territories to which they belong, establishing a collaboration with local administrations. In this way, the dissemination of the historical knowledge acquired by the research team will constitute a qualifying component in the body of the project.
