Testo in italiano:

Il progetto intende indagare i “cinephemera” nel quadro della storia del cinema italiano lungo il suo periodo di centralità nel sistema dei media e nelle abitudini al consumo (’36–’66); e attraverso di essi illuminare regioni inesplorate del cinema nazionale.

Con il termine “cinephemera” si indica un’eterogenea congerie di oggetti, carte, manufatti che tiene traccia delle interazioni fra cultura materiale, quotidianità del pubblico e consumo cinematografico.

La ricerca si concentrerà su tre categorie di materiali: oggetti collezionabili (figurine, cigarette cards, calendari e altra oggettistica prodotta in serie a ispirazione cinematografica), carte (lettere dei/delle fan a star e rubriche di fan mail della stampa popolare e specializzata), manufatti (diari, agende, scrapbooks ecc.).

Sul piano metodologico, la ricerca fa riferimento agli studi sulla cultura materiale e alla microstoria, per inquadrare gli ephemera come oggetti della socialità quotidiana, e ai fandom e gender studies per ricostruire le dinamiche di consumo partecipativo e il modo in cui collaborano alla costruzione di una soggettività maschile e femminile.

Le attività e i risultati previsti sono volti al raggiungimento di quattro obiettivi principali:

1) Interrogazione teorica del concetto di “ephemera” quando applicato a contesti e oggetti specifici, cadenzata dallo svolgimento di un seminario dottorale per ciascuna unità coinvolta;

2) Cartografia degli ephemera attraverso un ampio lavoro di mappatura dei corpora archivistici e delle collezioni personali individuate e di schedatura e documentazione fotografica dei rinvenimenti più rappresentativi;

3) “Quadro anatomico” degli ephemera, che consisterà in affondi interpretativi su alcuni studi di caso afferenti alle diverse categorie (oggetti collezionabili, carte e manufatti): tali affondi saranno oggetto di disseminazione in convegni, di un numero speciale di rivista di fascia A open access, di una pubblicazione monografica; si prevede la pubblicazione conclusiva di una "Enciclopedia dei Cinephemera";

4) Valorizzazione e riattualizzazione degli ephemera come patrimonio storico, attraverso l'organizzazione di seminari con gli archivisti, di workshop formativi di Media Education di "rimediacazione" creativa e l’allestimento di una Mostra digitale dell’Effimero.

Text in English:
The project sets out to investigate "cinephemera" in the history of Italian cinema during the period of its prime role in the media system and consumer habits ('36–'66) and use them to cast light on unexplored regions of Italian film. The term "cinephemera" is used to indicate a hotchpotch of objects, paper items and artefacts that keep trace of the interactions between material culture, the audience's everyday life and film consumption.
Specifically, the research will concentrate on three categories of materials: collectibles (trading cards, cigarette cards, calendars and other movie-inspired mass-produced objects), paper items (fan letters to stars and fan mail columns in the popular and specialized press) and artefacts (personal and appointment diaries, scrapbooks and other items spontaneously produced by spectators).
At the methodological level, the research takes its cue from studies on material culture and microhistory to frame ephemera as objects of everyday sociality, and from fandom and gender studies to rebuild the participatory consumption trends and how they come together to build male and female subjectivities.

The activities and expected results aim to achieve four main goals:
1) To make a theoretical examination of the concept of "ephemera" when applied to specific contexts and objects, with each research unit involved holding a doctoral seminar in this connection;
2) To map the ephemera with extensive work to plot the archival corpora and personal collections identified, producing a catalogue and photographic documentation of the most representative findings;
3) To form an “anatomical picture” of the ephemera, entailing in-depth interpretation of case studies on the different categories (collectibles, paper items and artefacts): this research will be disseminated in conferences, a special issue of a class A open access journal, a monographic publication and the publication of an Encyclopaedia of cinephemera;
4) To promote ephemera as historical heritage by organizing seminars with archivists, and give them new life through workshops on their creative “remediation” as well as a digital exhibition on the ephemeral. In addition, the research will also be disseminated through a website and a call for ephemeral materials on social platforms.
